

A VL real life claim example

Employers Liability

Post Traumatic Stress

The Insured company, commercial photographers, had a contract with a Government department to produce videos for the personnel training. This work was done solely by a specialist employee. Much of his work involved filming and editing disturbing material. The employee eventually developed a severe stress condition and his employment was terminated on an agreed basis. Nonetheless he issued a civil claim against the Insured.

The court found that the stress was caused by the nature of his work and that the Insured had failed to take adequate precautions to mitigate his stressful duties, despite being aware of the issue for a long period of time. The claim was unsuccessfully defended and the Court awarded damages of $200,000 which was indemnified under the Employers Liability policy. Legal costs were around $80,000.

CEG 022-102019/000